

ABSTRACT

The present invention describes a system wherein an RF ID card uses a user interface, such as a keypad, to input a password. The password is encrypted and sent to an RF ID reader. Since the password is not permanently stored on the RF ID card, someone stealing the RF ID card cannot use the RF ID card to impersonate a user.

11/11/2010 10:11:11 AM